3	Not sure if this fits what you are researching but about 2 years ago, we discontinued proctoring an in-house CPAT (physical agility) as part of getting on the eligible list. Instead, the eligible list is based on written exam only, and we require applicants to produce proof of CPAT at the time of their final selection interview (typically 2nd interview, assuming they've made it that far) showing they've successfully passed the CPAT in the last 6 months. At the community college, this typically costs $150 for the prep class and demo test. We also accept CPAT proof from other licensed Fire agencies. We also require proof of EMT at the same point in the hiring process, but this has never been part of the eligible list process.	Aug 6, 2012 1:29 PM

Affidavit should contain income and expense history for the past 12 months and an explanation as to why they can not pay the fee.	Jul 12, 2012 4:06 PM

1	Candidates complain about the test questions not being relevant to today's work environment	Aug 28, 2012 3:54 PM
2	No complaints. When they ask, I merely tell them that we have had many people apply for positions, we order and pay for tests for which we are not reimbursed when they fail to show up. No problems.	Aug 28, 2012 3:24 PM
3	None.	Aug 28, 2012 2:57 PM
4	Our last testing cycle was the first time we have charged for testing. We did not have any complaints from applicants and candidates on the fees. I think they appreciated that they did not have to pay the entire $100 up front and only paid as they made it through each cycle of the testing process.	Aug 28, 2012 2:51 PM

Historically we have received appeals on the rejection of an application, test scores/performance, residency related issues, etc. Complaints/appeals are first handled by HR staff. If the appellant does not agree with the staff decision they can take their appeal to the Civil Service Commission.	Jul 13, 2012 8:13 AM

1	We do not charge applicants for the cost of testing.	Aug 28, 2012 2:55 PM
2	Is charging to submit an application old school in the times of online applications? Do you only charge who will take a standardized written test which causes money to the department?	Jul 30, 2012 8:08 PM
3	We instituted the fee to cover the cost of the test and the administration. We have appoximately 6 test dates a year with 25 seats available. We found that a large number of applicants would apply but not show up to take the test, so there were really interested in being officers and they were not being able to test timely because so many were holding the places and not showing up. Once we instituted the fee than the number of applicants who actually make the test date increased by 50%. And only those who are really interested in trying to become officers are applying. 4	The City of Minneapolis was under Federal Court Order regarding the hiring of Firefighters for about 30 years, from the early 1970s until I believe 2002 or 2003. In 2006, the City conducted its first entry level hiring process outside of a consent decree in about 35+ years. In the 1970s the City of Minneapolis was taken to court and its testing practices were found to be discriminatory against three minority groups (African American, Hispanic and Native Americans.) The court case was Carter vs. Gallagher. ( http://openjurist.org/452/f2d/315/carter-v-gallagher )	Jul 13, 2012 8:13 AM
